TAILORED LIVING
INTERIORS

Why an interior designer can save you time and money, enrich your life and reduce stress levels

Great spaces don't happen by chance, they are the result of professionals working and planning for months before any installation

Interior design is a skill and an art. Hiring an interior designer is always the right decision when you have invested or are about to invest some money into your property.

An interior designer will ensure the final result is not only beautiful to look at but also functional.

Gloria Sanchez from Tailored Living Interior is creating interiors which are a reflection of the client's personality and style, making it work for the way they live their lives.

After completing work on a property in Farnham, she said: "A good designer will bring a set of trained eyes to any project and notice things which are often missed, as a result of years of experience together with an artistic eye.

"Hiring a designer will save you money by helping you avoid making expensive mistakes and recommending correct materials for the project.

"Have you ever walked into a friend's home and realised some items of furniture were not the right size or shape for the room?"

"Or painted a wall to realise it was not the right colour and it had to be done again?"

"Have you bought an item of furniture which looked great at the showroom but didn't look so good at home?"

"A designer can ultimately make you money by enhancing the value of your number one asset – your home.

"Any property which has been interior designed will always command a premium price.

"A designer can save you money by closely monitoring your budget and allocate a percentage of the budget to various elements of your project, helping you see what you can afford to spend on each area of redecoration.

"If you want to have very elaborate curtains it might mean reducing your budget for floor coverings.

"All these adjustments are made through the design process and always before the actual job begins.

"Interior designers also understand the lead times and make sure items are on site when required, saving the client money on having to bring tradespeople back.

"A good interior designer will enrich your life by improving your environment.

"When people think about health and well-being they think about diet and activity levels.

"However, the environment they choose to live in will affect their emotional state of mind in both a negative and positive manner.

"A designer will know which colour to use to add calm and repose in a bedroom or how the lack of light in a room can have a negative effect on the emotional state of mind.

"Lighting can play a vital role when it comes to enhancing interior ambiances and we have quite a few lighting tricks up our sleeves.

"All interior designers have a little black book of exclusive contacts and they will know where to go to get the most skilled craftsmanship.

"The designer will also manage and co-ordinate relations between builders and contractors using drawings and other tools to ensure all parties involved fully understand the intricacies of a project, ultimately minimising or eliminating any potential mistakes or pitfalls.

"A designer can speak to the tradespeople and suppliers in their 'language' and make sure everyone is on the same page.

"They will have an extensive network and range of resources to tap into and will be able to provide appropriate solutions when those unforeseen problems arise, minimising any stress for the homeowner.

"The designer will also have experience of working with recommended trades so the client can be confident in the quality of their work.

"Great spaces don't happen by chance, they are the result of professionals working, planning, sourcing and co-ordinating for hours, weeks and months before installation even starts to take place."
